Dear Friend,

We have had many discussions concerning your class and my opinion not only of my classmates but also of the school and in general how I feel about going back to school. I hate school with a passion that I think can only be found in ancient enemies and Nazi's. However when it comes down to it your class was one of the ones I hated least. Although I enjoy learning I just simply am not a fan of schooling and gen ed classes feel like the ultimate waste of time.

The fact that you were willing to let us decide and were not only helpful but actually interested in where we took the class was definitely a breath of fresh air. It made your class something that I actually enjoyed. The fact I was able to "troll" some of my less educated classmates was also something that made the day much better. I cannot blame a teacher for a class that is forced upon students, but I can blame them for how they run it. You my good sir ran it well, you kept it interesting and [REDACTED]. Overall I can say that although I did not learn how to write (although I did learn about annotated bibs since I had never done that before) I actually enjoyed the class and found it at the very least thought provoking. Which is more than I can say for a lot of the schooling I've done in my life.

Sincerely,
Nelson Barajas
